Nominal Capacity (Cn)

The nominal capacity (Cn) is the electric charge (in Ah) which a battery can supply with a current

C_n
 20 (A) to a final voltage of 10.5 V.

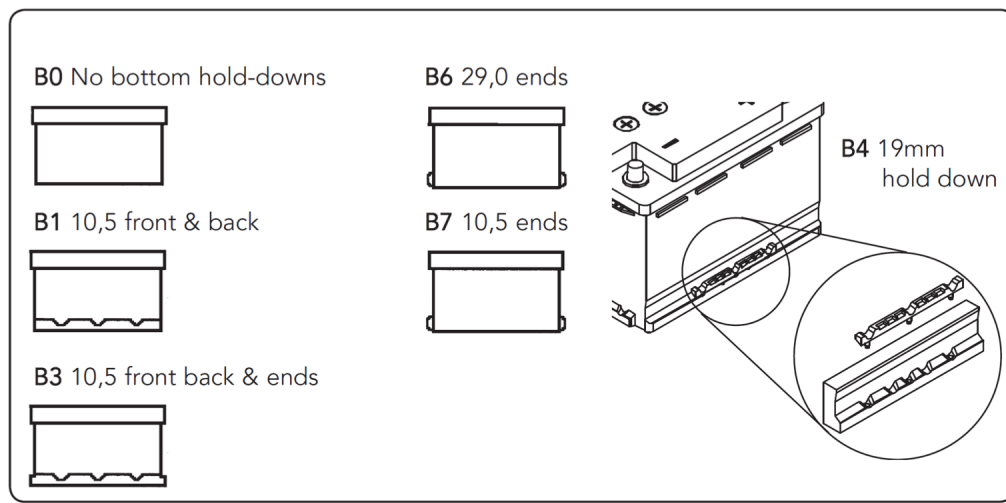

Nominal Reserve Capacity (Cr,n)

The nominal reserve capacity (Cr,n) is the period of time (in minutes) for which a battery can maintain a discharge current of 25 A to a cut-off voltage of 10.5 V.

SAE Cranking Performance Test

The SAE cranking performance current is defined as the current a battery at a temperature of -18°C can deliver for 10 seconds while maintaining a voltage of greater than or equal to 7.5 V and a voltage of greater than or equal to 7.2 V after 30 seconds.
